ISIL the Super Power

UK, 24.11.2015, 00:19 Time

USPA NEWS - How comforting to know that what has occupied my country in June last year was a Super Power.

We thought at the time that Maliki's 6 well armed brigades just run away in front of a bunch of hooligans chasing them with pick up trucks and were using some light Kalashnikovs and other light weapons.

Al Maliki's army was really fortified with very heavy weapons and tanks and all sort of state of the art and most modern gear they spent billions of US Dollars to buy and more billions on training.

Everyone thought they were really cowards when they abandoned their arms and run away for their lives and were buying Dishdashas (villagers' traditional clothes) in a way that raised the price of Dishdasha to an unprecedented level.

Now, when we look to the 4 Super Great Powers who are fighting ISIL; America, Russia, France and now Britain is joining after the meeting between David Cameron and François Hollande in Paris yesterday I can see that ISIL are not only some Hooligans gathered from all over the world just to kill people and steal Oil.

Add to those 4 Super Powers lots of very powerful countries like Australia, Canada, Japan, Germany, Holland, Turkey and many others.

One has to admit that we are facing Almighty ISIL.

Cameron who is on a life mission to cut the benefits from poor people and kicking them out of the houses they lived in for years if not generations and to cut everything related to the safety and convenience of the same people who elected him and his party, he is now willing to spend billions of Sterling to buy new arms of all kind from the very heavy Carriers to dozens of very expensive fighter jets to brand new frigates to you name it. Or maybe that was the real reason why they were axing all that relates to poor people's housing and benefit to a degree that key workers can't afford to live in London.

That reminds me of someone before him wanted to leave a legacy of a conqueror behind, one who ended up to be in real disgrace and even face being tried for a criminal of war.

The same massive army gathered together in the Second World War to face the threat of Hitler and the Nazis.

Is that (Daesh) (or ISIS or ISIL) have same ability as was Hitler and Germany then?

I doubt anyone would answer with a nod of their head.

Germany was a great major manufacturing country that manufactured all its supreme weapons hence was the need to gather all the great powers on Earth to face its mighty army.

ISIS manufactures absolutely nothing. Not even a plastic hair comb.

Germany had allies namely the Axis, countries like Japan, Italy, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and others.

ISIL has no allies; nor does it have friends. Literally everyone on Earth are their enemy.

What is the secret in gathering all this power to fight ISIS? Who are ISIS? Where did they come from? To cover all the territory they are occupying don't they need money and lots of it? Where is it coming from?

How did they appear all of a sudden and mushroomed like this in such a short time?

Last month the Russian forces claimed they hit ISIS or Daesh (the new official name for ISIS/ISIL used by Obama and John Kerry) with more than 1700 air strikes within one month only.

America and its allies had fighter jets from all over the world pounding ISIS for more than a year and they only managed to capture back very little territory from them, namely in Tikrit, Baiji and Mount Sinjar in Iraq. Only Kubani in Syria (with the help of the Peshmarga "" the Iraqi Kurdish Militia. That happened with all ground forces by the Iraqi Army, the Shia'a Militias and the help of the Kurdish Militia.

The rumors say that ISIS didn't lose any of its forces in all the areas that they lost (apart from Kubani in Syria) while the opposition lost heavily. They might even accepted bribes to withdraw from the territories they were occupying, as the rumors go.

In the meantime, while all these forces pound ISIS, ISIS still very strong and they manage to down a Russian plain in Sinai Desert and kill all 224 people who were on board, and manage to kill over 130 people in a major operation in France that caused France to live up to this moment in a fear and tension not being seen since the WWII days

And after less than a week manage to occupy an American hotel in Mali and kill another 27 people and to cause Britain's Schools to cancel their school trips to the touristic areas with signs of the number of tourists coming to those same are dropping sharply, and the police together with the army in both France and Belgium to stay on high alert for God knows how long more.

Apparently, ISIS are moving like Ghosts.

They can avoid all the cameras that are everywhere in Paris and in Brussels and the one gangster who managed to evade capture from the time he and his brothers among other criminals committed the heinous crime in Paris. They have even the cheeks to tell us that he run away on a BMW heading towards Germany.

A petty thief running away with a stolen vehicle would set the police force to use at least one helicopter and several cars to chase that thief until they capture him, yet the criminal who is the most wanted in the whole of Europe if not the World manages to get away between these countries without being chased or captured.

France is passing all kind of legislations to curb the freedom their people fought for generations to gain and the same happening in the UK among other nations.

Now, France is raving with racism against Muslims and everything relating to Islam, maybe you can't blame them on this one, but they threatening to withdraw passports from even the people who were born in France.

The UK is using this opportunity to pass surveillance legislations and various other to curb the freedom and liberty of its people including and not limited to giving the power to police without the need for a court order to put a surveillance on any group Or individual among other rules that will make the British citizen loses their liberty that they fought very hard for generations to gain. Bombing ISIS is one thing, but the other is bombing the people living in the areas where ISIS operates.

Where are we going from here? Who is losing in this battle?"
